PREFACE

Here beginneth the record of the Class of 1910. The present volume sets an introductory chapter to the history we have yet to write. Volume I speaks of parentage and preparation, of college honors and associations, and ends with a hopeful little suggestion of future occupations that are "probable" or "undecided." By this, our own account, we are nothing more than one among many classes that have graduated from Yale, with little to distinguish us in the company of elders that we enter. What position we shall take amid that company depends upon the things that we shall now proceed to do. With the achievements of our first few years behind us, may 1910 again appear before the alumni of Yale, in Volume II, already a class marked for conspicuous success.

IN FRESHMAN YEAR.

FRESHMAN YEAR

It is not unusual for a class history to be a mere eulogy of its members. It will be prefaced perhaps by laudatory remarks hailing the new class, even in its earliest appearance as Freshmen, as the greatest that has ever come to Yale. To greet 1910 in a similar way, however, would be not only conventional but also bromidic. Too many have already sung its praises to add unnecessary comment. Let its records as narrated in these pages stand for themselves. Such modesty is but a shield to cover our own personal opinions, to which we all assuredly have a right, and first among our retrospective thoughts is that September 26, 1906, will always stand out conspicuously in the annals of Yale; for it was on that day the Class of 1910 made its advent to New Haven.

Three hundred and thirty-seven there were of us, scattered almost entirely in the various dormitories of the York Street "Freshman Row." Some three-score found nests in the Pierson brick barn, privileged, for the first few weeks, mainly in excellent interior illuminations in the shape of nightly hall bonfires. As many more located in the sumptuous Garland palaces, while others sought futile refuge from Sophomore hazers in adjacent buildings of possibly less pretentious character.

Whatever our choice, we all found time to don caps and to assemble at the corner of Osborn (impressive then as never since) at dusk on that memorable evening when first we felt the thrill of being members of Yale. With feeble voice we yelled our first "1910 this way!" and with feverishly excited hearts allowed ourselves to be marshaled into line by Seniors with great white sweaters and immeasurably greater and more impressive blue "Y's." Inconceivable thought! that one day we should hold nonchalantly the same flaring torches and take our places at the head of the same procession. Suddenly there burst forth the first strains of "March, March on Down the Field." Unconsciously we drew in a deep breath, and the next minute we were whirling down the street, utterly content as we skipped to and fro in the gyrations of the snake dance. The rest is all a blur—a dreamy recollection of incidents never to be forgotten—the march and cheering in the streets, the heavy swaying of the crush on the Campus, the indistinct vista of the little ring, the Seniors squatted on the ground, the marshals calling for "Freshman lightweight," our random shouts of encouragement to Richardson, Platt and Coy as they strove valiantly to throw the Sophomores, and the one solace allowed us in the match which the last-mentioned drew. Then the excitement which followed on York Street, the few mad rushes in which we met our foes face to face, the departure of little groups dragging unfortunate Freshmen to Billy's to be initiated into the mysteries of a beer shampoo (rumor still has it that Bayne-Jones's flaxen hair imbibed its hue from the beery suds in which it soaked that evening), and lastly the cries far into the night of "Ho! Fresh! put out that light!"—all will retain their places in the reminiscences of our future.

The reception for us at Dwight Hall a few days later, though of a somewhat different character, was yet not without its deep impression, for was it not our privilege, in addition to meeting many of our classmates, to shake hands for the first time with our President? That the patronizing advice of the first few News editorials to do something and that the wisdom imparted to us by upperclassmen that night as to just what a Freshman should do were not lost upon us, the records alluded to above will attest. The inmates of 242 and 238 York alone profited little by the Freshman reception, as Mr. G. had already begun to point out the "big men" of the college who had been "made" solely by him and promised to do as much for his latest installment. What fatherly advice he gave, however, did not prevent his charges falling easy victims to the common prey of every solicitor of subscriptions from the much abused "Cow" to Chinese Yali. Many even invested in fifty volume Histories of the World at one-fourth the real value, or a rate of $1.00 a month for ten years.

That college life is not all made up of thrills and sensations was proved to us in the next few weeks. While our attention was divided between trying for the football team, the crew, and occupying first row balcony seats at every show that came to the "Hyp.," we at least shared that close association into which we were all brought with "Toot" Farr and his cohorts that comprised the Freshman faculty—an association pleasant for a few, but rather disastrous for more. At least it brought a representation of eleven men on the football team down to nine—still a good showing in comparison to Sheff's five. Of such caliber indeed was this team that they often proved more than a match for the University team in practice, and not infrequently such comments as the following appeared in the News:

"The freshman team did such very strong offensive work, both in line rushes and in the new open plays, that the ball was kept in the University's territory most of the time."

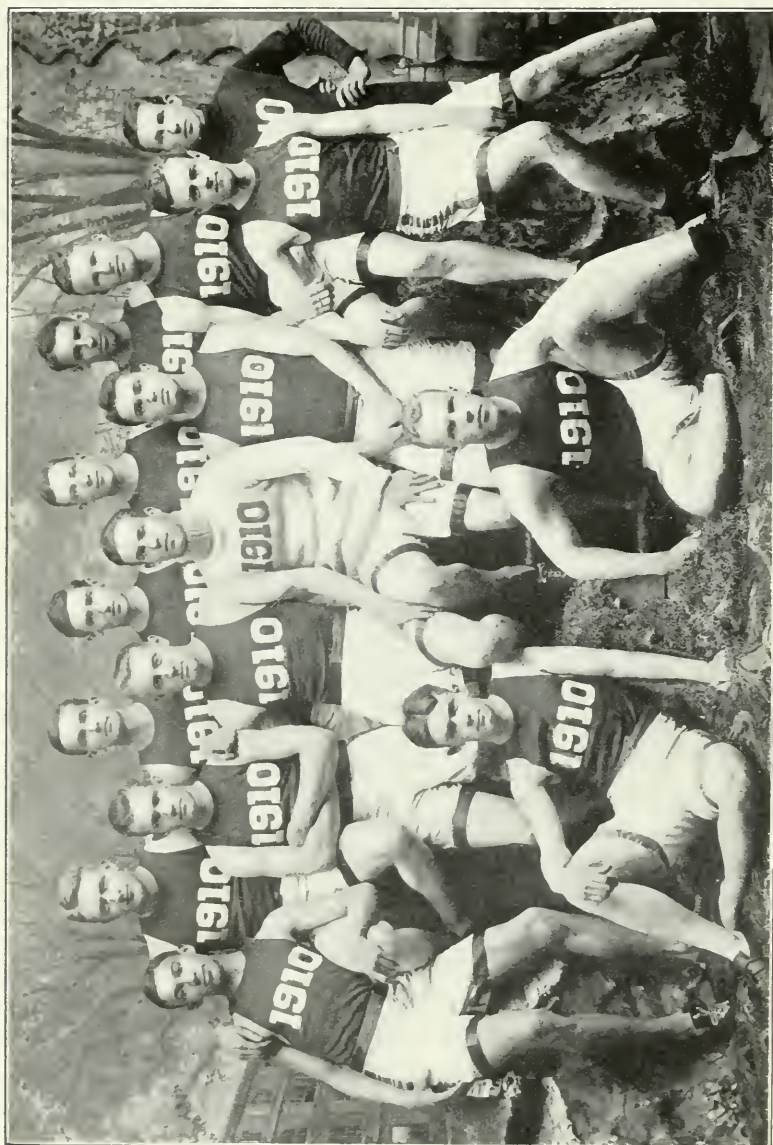

Andover and Exeter, to whom in years past Freshman teams had fallen easy prey, were decisively beaten, and as the season finally came to a close under the leadership of Captain Coy,

FRESHMAN GLEE CLUB.

Princeton and Harvard were trimmed to the tune of 14 and 28 to 0 respectively, while our own goal line remained still uncrossed. One hundred and twenty-two points to opponents' 0 in seven games was their record—a record second only to that of the Yale championship team of this year, where history only repeated itself with ten of that Freshman squad playing and the same captain. Coy, Murphy, Philbin, Holt, Bingham, Goebel, Logan, Platt and Richardson were the ones to receive our first numerals.

While football occupied a large share of our attention, it by no means absorbed all. Although our Sheff. brothers defeated the Academic crew by one-quarter of a length in the fall regatta, and though we counted but two points in the fall interclass track meet, Eames and Bowen were helping our team to win the class basketball championship; and Connell, Lohmann and Pomeroy were similarly helping to make the musical clubs a success—astonishing precocity for Freshmen. Of course our representation extended to many other organizations, witness Hebard on the gun team, but why mention an event insignificant in class history compared to the prominence achieved by the same individual later when he brought his machine to New Haven?

So much for the fall term, which saw us get away to a good start. Only the Christmas exams remained, and whether we were so careless as to drop a few hours or not, we were nevertheless glad of a chance to swell our chests and patronize our families for a few weeks.

It was a hard blow to find ourselves once more confronted by the merciless tyranny of Prof. Beebe or by that other bane of the Freshman curriculum, Prof. Gooch's Chemistry, but there was recompense in the associations that grew more pleasant daily as we came to know our classmates better. The edges of stoic indifference seemingly assumed by those who came amongst us favored with many friends, and of bashful awkwardness evidenced by others, alike wore off. The two "Arrays"—Curtiss and Holt—remained for some time, however, an insolvable puzzle, distinguishable, as the Fence Orator tersely expressed it, only by the monograms on their socks. Curtiss did not think this sufficient and even caused his picture to be inserted a second time in the group photograph of 242, so that there might be no mistake as to his identity.

Prom week is always a source of unending delight to Freshmen, with its festivities on which they literally wax fat; and 1910's enjoyment of that series of occasions was not exceptional. On Saturday we saw two of our number—Riggs and Warren—assist materially in the successful production of "The Amazons" by the Dramatic Association. Clement and Franchot were also elected to membership in that organization. Sunday brought us a two-fold benefit in the opportunity that a crowded chapel gave many to cut the service with impunity, and in the heartless, ungentlemanly delight we all shared afterwards in compelling our elders to walk the gauntlet and their partners to pass our inspection. Monday, however, saw the climax of our hopes in the Prom. Concert. Although we shouted ourselves hoarse, lowered a few chickens to maintain our reputation as Freshmen, and did everything in our power short of breaking down the gallery rail over which we leaned four and five deep, yet were we not so indecorous as to break up the concert before the better part of the programme had been completed, nor did we incur ignominy to such an extent as to deprive 1911 of the same pleasures.

Prom. week aroused in us a dormant social side, for Clement, Coy, Curtiss, Dickey, R. B. Hall, Hartridge, Minnigerode, Phelps, H. B. Reid, E. C. Roberts and Richardson presently joined the Apollo musically inclined organizations and no fewer than thirty-two of us swelled the ranks of the Freshman glee club. That there is much truth in the old adage that a dress suit is the only requisite for membership was fairly proven by one Brookes Spencer, tenor. Brookes's voice, on the Zimmerman order, underwent the strain of first trials with difficulty, but it was never taxed again, as, once on the squad, he artfully changed to a falsetto that managed to escape the vigilance of Leader VanSinderen for the rest of the year. Perhaps the best thing about this club, which "let its glasses clink" to the tune of "For to-night we will be merry" in one after another of New Haven's churches, was its plush-horse manager. Once the aforementioned social instinct had been aroused, it took little time for Elton Hoyt, 2d, of Euclid Avenue fame, to assume his place of leadership, one which he has never surrendered, as the class statistics will substantiate.

Washington's Birthday saw us once more in conflict with the Sophomores. Although our team of McLaury, Kugel, and Snyder lost in the milder exercise of debate, the flying wedge headed by Goebel, Cooney and divers other giants proved too much for 1909 in the after-chapel rush, and the decision of the marshals was justly awarded in our favor. Meanwhile ninety-four candidates were plodding away daily, hoping for an eventual place on the crew, while the remainder of the class that had no available excuse, whether athletically inclined or not, were subjected to Dr. Anderson's course in calisthenics at more or less irregular intervals. The minor athletic hockey and basketball teams met with indifferent success, the former losing to Harvard 3-2 and the latter 23-17, and it remained for Murphy to uphold alone 1910's athletic prestige by winning a place at guard on the championship University basketball team. In more intellectual circles French, O'Brien and VanSinderen contributed articles to the time-honored Lit., while before the year was over Clow, Williams, Jewett, Hewes and J. E. Barber "heeled" their way on to that oldest of college dailies—the News—the last three destined later to become its officers. Taft meanwhile was leading the class in the field of scholarship with an average unprecedented in Freshman annals. His was an enviable record, for not only did he tie with Riggs for the entrance prize in Greek and with Cohen for the similar award in Latin, but he shared with Whitman the Benjamin F. Barge Mathematical Prize and with Bentley, Cohen and Jefferson the Berkeley Premiums in Latin Composition. Keeler, Mungall and Snyder should not be overlooked, while on the subject of intellectual endeavor, for defeating the Harvard Freshmen at Cambridge in the annual debate.

But such matters will seem trivial in the run of time in comparison with the sensations we experienced together in the dawn of a new spring. Our college apprenticeship was almost at an end. Already we had imbibed deep into our lungs a little of that indefinable "atmosphere of Yale." It had put a backbone of serious effort into our immature lives, at the same time spoiling none of the fun and the joy of living that is never more present than in Freshmen. No longer did the upperclassmen as they looked up at our chapel galleries have to fear for the future. In six months' time we had really begun to look like something and to assume characteristics of at least strong possibilities. We were sensible of this change ourselves, and as we "bickered" in the street or strolled to the Field on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons in little groups with new-found friends, our thoughts often drifted to the next and later years to come, in anticipation of the larger life we were soon to fill in the college world.

So the spring term drifted lazily and pleasantly along. The attention lavished so absorbingly in the first days of the fall on the football team was now impartially bestowed on the crew, the nine and the track team. The baseball team, with the addition of Merritt, 1909 S., to the pitching staff, vanquished Princeton 1-0 and 10-0, and the track team met with similar success against the same opponents 64-40. May 25, however, chilled our athletic aspirations temporarily, not to mention the swath it cut in our pocketbooks, for not only was the track team defeated 59-58 at Cambridge, but the ball team simultaneously lost a heart-breaking game on the home grounds 3-2, for which only an 8-4 victory at Harvard the following week atoned. Our representatives on the track team were Cooney, Coy, Goebel, L. M. King, Nelson, W. H. Parsons and Platt, and on the nine, Bingham, Coy, Logan, Murphy, Philbin and R. H. Rogers. Coy thus had the distinction of winning his numerals in three different branches of athletics, besides ranking first in the Freshman strength tests. The daily rows at the harbor finally resulted in the following men leaving for New London: Austin, Brainard, Coates, Hoyt, Wallis, Wodell, Buist, E. A. Morse and J. S. Roberts, of whom the last two eventually rowed in the four, Buist coxswaining.

Only the Omega Lambda Chi procession, followed by another class victory over 1909 in both the relay race and tug of war, and the fence orations, in which Hartridge most creditably received that honored gift in our behalf, remain to be mentioned in the chronicles of that memorable first year. After Commencement most of us lingered to see our first boat race at New London, when 1910 was defeated by only three-quarters of a length by a heavier and stronger Harvard eight, but the University crew won a brilliant race in the last half mile, turning the tables of the previous year. Scattered once more we were, but united for the first time by a bond that was to bind us even more intimately for three years to come, and for as many more as memory and life last; yet as we caught a glimpse of that untraveled world through the arch of our first year's experience, who did not feel as sure then as now, looking backward, that our Freshman year was priceless in value—in development and in associations?

EARL T. WILLIAMS.

SOPHOMORE YEAR

It was not a matter of great significance that on the night of September 26, 1907, the Freshmen won two out of three of the wrestling matches on the Campus, and it was only amusing that the boisterous demonstrations of this lower class were observed to continue until somewhat after midnight. They were informed, evidently, that of the 311 members of our class, 106 were settled for peaceful sleep in the Hutchinsons, 69 in the rural districts of Crown Street, 29 were in a mythical "elsewhere," and that only 34 per cent. of us were at watch upon the Campus. It was evident that they knew this, for they marched and counter-marched with themselves around the flagpole on the Green and in remote quarters of Elm Street, carefully removed from the chance of encountering Sophomores. Jack Sweeney and Joe Roberts, who were vanquished in the classic struggle, and Hub Bradley, who took a palm in this Olympian revival upon the grass of dear old Yale, and all the rest of us were conscious of a distinction more real than noise and wrestling prowess, which denoted our superiority over the position now occupied by the Class of 1911. All who took their younger friends to Mory's on the nights of that first week—and all, as shown by statistics carefully compiled by the Hogans, all did this—knew that a complete change had come upon us since last year. In each case the grateful Freshman murmured to his benefactor, while he traced the Chinese puzzle of initials with one finger, "Gee, but I'm lucky to be received at Mory's so soon!" With no thought of scorn or ridicule, the Sophomore replied to this simple confidence with advice about conduct and a caution that as professors never marked after the first year, it was profitable to get a good stand at the start. This might have betokened that the Sophomore's simplicity was quite as naïve in large matters as ever it was in the days of concern over Mory's privileges and pipes on the street. But, granting that as true, his superiority lay here in his larger business and his larger amusements. His conversation was full of expressions of dignity, of positive opinions and of references to the affairs and policies of this institution as familiar as the reminiscences of a resigned member of the Corporation. Just gone into intellectual long pants, the Sophomore was the elder brother to the whole College.

Shortly after the first football game, in the beginning of October, in which Brown, Cooney, Goebel, Philbin, Murphy and Coy composed practically all the team, an event other than athletic occurred as an omen of the future fame of our class. This was a manifestation of the worldly ungodliness and general religious liberality which has made our class, to speak mildly, an anxiety to Dwight Hall and which put us on a profitable basis of competition with Yale in China and other well-established heathen interests. The transgression which aroused the celestial unrest was this: we elected, quite contrary to precedent, our German committee one day before our class deacons were chosen. On October 10, Elton Hoyt, as chairman, Lyle Hall, as floor-manager, together with Merrell Clement, Earl Williams and Ford Johnson were placed in office to arrange the light terpsichorean pleasure of the class. A day later Bill Duncan, Pascal Franchot, Chalmers Holbrook and Gus Knight were chosen the class deacons. In the very start of the race to salvation Dwight Hall was a lap, as it were, behind Harmonie Hall; and the finish—is beyond the limits of this history and is left for the recording of another angel or some one of the eternal bookkeepers.

Through the warm afternoons of the fall we loitered through attendance at football practice, and in the track games watched Spike Seymour, Max Kirjassoff, Al Haskell and Frank Nelson begin to gain their places on the team. Continuing in this pleasant athletic sauntering, we joined the picnic of canoes, crew races, pop-corn and shell games called the Fall Regatta at Lake Whitney. Here, we were disappointed to see that in the various rowing contests Captain Ewen's class crew and his own personally conducted club crew were able to place in only third and second positions. Valuable material, however, was developed at this time, for upon this training George Buist has since been able to alternate with the utmost facility between coxswain and bow any afternoon according to the needs of our well-balanced crew.

This gentle dalliance with sportsmanship was soon changed to the more serious business of the championship football games. Coy's two touchdowns in the first of these, by which Princeton was defeated 12 to 10, more than rejoiced those who had the interests of Yale at heart, more or less deeply according to the sex of the companion in the next seat, and equally comforted those who had an added interest in Yale at pocket. Goebel, Cooney and Murphy were strong in the line-up for this game, and a week later, when Harvard was defeated 12 to 0, Philbin took his place with these men on the team.

Shortly after the Bennett memorial fountain, white and naked, had been set to shiver through the winter on the corner of the Green, and drip icicles for the thirsty poor, the glee club and basketball team went South for the holidays. The first organization took Minnigerode, the delicate Lohmann and the frail Pomeroy to the gentler clime; the latter cared for Ducky Eames after the same fashion.

With correspondence as heavy as that of a tenor soloist returning from the "Girl-in-Every-City" result of a glee club trip, we came back from the holiday to the preparations for the Prom. The German committee kept us amused with daily bits of gossip in the Notes about patronesses, partners and payments, the ten fortunate stags were drawn, amidst chants and incantations, from Elton's mystic hat, and on the evenings of the twentieth and twenty-first of January we ended the festival with the dances at Harmonie Hall and the Armory.

Upon these pleasures came the serious business which marks the stress and exactions of Sophomore year. According to this necessity many important elections were held at various times during the remaining months. Prex White was chosen assistant manager of the Football Association, with Tom Hewes as secretary. For assistant managerships of baseball and track,

SOPHOMORE GERMAN GROUP.

Ford Johnson and Milt Griggs were chosen, together with Clack Hawke and Brookes Spencer as respective secretaries. Harry Curtiss was elected assistant manager and secretary of the boat club. These were followed in May by the choice of the Freshman managers as follows: John Heron, baseball; Harry Bingham, crew; Albert DeSilver, football; and Bayne-Jones, track.

In the meantime, in March, Bill Duncan was elected vice president of the Christian Association. Upon this action a kind of episcopal beneficence seemed to be bestowed upon the voters of the class, for at our next meeting we surrendered a third position on the Prom. committee to Sheff., reducing our own representation to eight men. By another act of philanthropy, we voted at this same meeting an appropriation of $20.00 from the German surplus, to be used by the Fence Orator in the matter of scaffolding, typewriting, detective service and other paraphernalia of his profession.

Our debating team, composed of Ned Snyder, Steve Keeler and Widger, defeated the Freshmen with ease. Their achievement was followed by the Fence rush on Washington's Birthday, in which our style and cavalier behavior were worth more than the victory accorded the Freshmen. After the manner of Goebel all of us were magnificent. A little later, John Heron was elected captain of the hockey team. According to the News he was John Heron, 1810, and upon this authoritative statement was hailed by the country's journals, notably the Register, as the "grand old man of Yale athletics" and we were congratulated upon the possession of so rare an athletic trophy.

On April 9, Donald Annis died.

With April came spring escorting various types of athletics—from the University sports to the quaintly dressed outlaw baseball teams from the alleys of Crown Street, the "Latin Quarter" of New Haven. In the more legitimate branches of athletics our representatives were many. Lyndon King, Coy, Cooney, Wilson, Goebel, Max Kirjassoff and Frank Nelson gained points for Yale in the track victories over Harvard and Princeton. Wallis and Wodell, who later rowed stroke and bow in the four-oar at New London, were members of the Junior eight that won the championship in record time at Philadelphia. On the baseball team Murphy and Philbin played throughout the season.

The results of the literary activities of the class were evident in the editorial elections of the year. Merrell Clement and Bill Shields, followed later by Connor, Powers and O'Brien, were made members of the Record board, and the News board, to which DeSilver, Spencer and Bayne-Jones had been added during the year, organized at the end with Jewett as chairman, Hewes as assignment-editor, and John Barber as business manager. Riggs, French, O'Brien and Hillis were leading in the competition for the Lit., and Riggs, Warren and Franchot were prominent in the work of the Dramatic Association.

Begun, as at Mory's, in giving advice to the Freshmen, the year ended with more admonitions to this same class. When, in June, Cæsar Lohmann bestowed upon those coming after us our Fence and its tradition, he spoke the last words of the Sophomore's advisory direction of the University, and for that matter of the world in general. Through a year harassed by incessant competition and somewhat distorted by the absorbing occupation of making a real place for ourselves in Yale, and through the large amusements that characterize Sophomore year, we had come to a quieter time, in which afterwards, in leisure, we should have the pleasure of growing younger before we were much older, of becoming more comfortable in Yale.

STANHOPE BAYNE-JONES.

JUNIOR YEAR

What a glorious day it was in the annals of the city of New Haven when the illustrious body of athletes, financiers and commuters constituting the Class of 1910 returned at the beginning of their Junior year prepared to do anything and anybody "for God, for Country and for Yale." Who can forget those wonderful fall days when we gathered around the Fence in front of Durfee, or on the steps of the oval entries, and walked the Campus full of the realization that at last we were part and parcel of that Campus, and rejoiced in our newly-acquired upper-class dignity! Who likewise can forget those joyful evenings at Mory's, full of mirth and song; the night of the rush with its noise and excitement! And here we could tell of five men in our class who on that memorable night adjourned to Child's at a late hour and consumed double portions of ice cream and baked beans, but they shall be nameless.

After the turmoil of the opening days we settled down to enjoy the courses we had so glibly elected at the end of Sophomore year, and to watch the progress of the football team. Our class was splendidly represented on the squad with Coy, Cooney, Logan, Murphy, Brown, Philbin, Bingham, Goebel, Johnson, Holt, Roberts, MacArthur, MacCarthy, Carter, Platt, and McCormick, while White and Hewes acted as assistant manager and secretary respectively. Owing to the injury to Captain Burch, Coy acted as field captain for the greater part of the season, and was afterwards elected captain, with White as manager. DeSilver had meanwhile been acting as president of the Freshman Football Association.

During this period the musical clubs had been holding nightly rehearsals and making the neighborhood of Dwight Hall hideous with sounds. The following men from our class went on the annual Christmas trip: (glee club) Lohmann, Hewes, Hotchkiss, Minnigerode, Pomeroy; (banjo club) Connell, Roberts, Knight, Clement, Phelps. Holt served as assistant manager, while Minnigerode, Pomeroy and Lohmann sang on the University quartette. Great were the doings of this happy throng, one of the most important being the founding of the Lone Star quartette, of which Clement, Holt and Connell were members.

Our class furnished a large contingent to the College choir, which Lohmann electrified periodically by his wonderful solos, and the Dramat. also drew considerable material from among our members. Riggs was secretary, Franchot assistant manager, while the following were members: Clement, Ely, H. Baker, Hewes, Obernauer, P. Roberts and Warren. The University orchestra also was in the able hands of our class, with Phelps as conductor, Wacker as manager and the following members: Dine, Brigham, R. Hall, Steele, Dreyfus, Knight and Roberts.

Scarcely had we returned from a most strenuous Christmas vacation, when we found ourselves face to face with the greatest social event which has ever occurred within the bounds of Yale or of the United States. We refer, of course, to the Prom.—our Prom. The members of the Prom. committee from our class were Hoyt as chairman, S. M. Clement as floor-manager, L. Hall, E. Williams, Johnson, Coy, Jewett and Holt; and all praise is due to them for their unceasing efforts which resulted in so successful and pleasant a function. Even the stag supper—oh well! we won't refer to that. For the first time this year the Prom. concert was held in Woolsey Hall instead of the Hyp. and the Freshmen were not admitted. After the last fair guest had left the New Haven House—and they were passing fair, some of them!—and long before the last bill had been paid, we settled down to a period of calm and studious (!) life, interrupted only by the activities of the minor athletic teams and of one or two organizations of which we shall speak later.

The hockey team was captained by Heron, and Johnson and Stevens played on it. Heron was reelected captain with Roome as manager.

Eames, Drew and Scudder played on the basketball team, and Eames was elected captain with Platt as manager. The latter managed the Freshman team.

In tennis our class was well represented. Noyes was assistant manager and Stevens captain. Eyre won the University championship for singles in the fall, while Bliss and Bretz won the doubles. Noyes was also assistant manager of the University tennis courts.

On the golf team Merriman was manager while Hayne and Clow were members. Merriman was elected captain.

Benner was assistant manager of the association football team, and Goddard, Jennings, Holbrook and Timm played on it.

Holt was a member of the fencing team, while Lewis captained the gym. team. Reid was president and manager of the swimming association, Dickey was secretary and treasurer of the gun club and was elected captain for the following year; Hebard was manager. Yates was assistant manager of the wrestling team, while Sweeney, Yates and Goebel were on the team.

In debating activities Harrison was manager, while Franchot, Hewes, Keeler, Taft and Widger were members. Widger was on the team which lost to Harvard, while Keeler was on the winning team against Princeton. Taft was elected president. Keeler, Widger, Obernauer, and Snyder were officers of the Yale Union, and the Academic team, of which Taft and Keeler were members, won the interdepartment debate.

Turning to Dwight Hall, we find that Duncan was vice president, Holbrook secretary and Goddard librarian. Duncan, Franchot, Holbrook and Knight acted as class deacons. Duncan was elected president.

Several men in our class looked after the interests of those who dared venture into Commons. They were: VanSinderen, Spencer, Jewett, O'Brien, Heron, Clow and Bayne-Jones. VanSinderen was elected president.

While these different associations were all busy along their various lines of activity, two organizations sprang up which deserve special mention. One of these was the "Benno Club," of which Holt was president and which numbered among its members such men as Goebel, Clement, Johnson, Noyes, Hotchkiss and an unlimited number of others. These men met as often as possible and consumed as much of the rich Benno brew as their conservative president would allow.

The other was "The Whiffenpoofs," which, though founded by a member of the Class of 1909, numbered Pomeroy, Minnigerode and Lohmann among its members. This body met on Monday nights at Mory's and usually ended by being thrown out of the oval at a late hour of the night. In the spring Connell, Hotchkiss, Hewes and Roome were elected, with Coy as "perpetual guest."

In January the musical club elected Lohmann and Connell leaders of the glee and banjo clubs respectively, and Holt manager. According to custom, Lohmann and Connell coached the Apollo musical clubs. In the spring these clubs presented cups to them, and it is interesting to note that Lohmann's was small, while Connell's was very large; the inference is obvious. Pomeroy was appointed one of the coaches of the 1912 glee club. Our class was very ably represented on the Apollo clubs, with L. Hall (leader), Barnes, Coy, Darling, MacLane, Cowles, R. Hall, Lake, Reid, Richardson, Stanley, Curtiss, Dickey, Fuller, Nabstedt, and A. Williams on the glee club, and McCord (leader), Davis, Ewen, Cooney, Harrison, Fouts and Hawke on the banjo club. Those were great days in that winter term, days full of work and play and fun; days when the end entry of Welch resounded with the jolly tones of Carroll Cooney's voice, while the oval windows were filled with men watching the Seniors frolic around the sundial.

Who will ever forget the day Miss Maude Adams presented "What Every Woman Knows," for the benefit of the Yale theatre, and was made an honorary member of the Dramat. and was accompanied to the station by a cheering throng of students, or who can forget that rainy March afternoon, when marshaled by some of our young rising athletes, we marched through the streets of New Haven behind the "Taft Club" standard in honor of the inauguration of America's first Yale president! What does it matter if most of our class did march under the Law School banner! We were there heart and voice!

But the careless, happy days drew to an end. In the midst of our frolics came that week of banquets which ushered in the change of administration in the various publications, and for the first time we realized that we had a real share in the administration of Yale and awoke to a sense of our responsibilities.

The News board from our class organized as follows: Jewett as chairman, Hewes as assignment editor, Barber as manager, Clow, DeSilver, Spencer, Bayne-Jones, E. Williams.

The Lit. announced elections as follows: French as chairman, J. Ford as manager, Riggs, Baker, Hillis, O'Brien. W. Williams was awarded a triangle.

The Record was made up as follows: S. M. Clement as chairman, Smith as manager, Powers, Shields, Jefferson, O'Brien, Connor, Hopkins.

The Courant announced the election of MacCarthy as chairman, Timm and Curtis as managers, Norton, Minnigerode, Fergusson, Baker, O'Brien.

At a most entertaining and novel smoker given by the Dramat. the elections of Riggs as president and Franchot as manager were announced.

Before we knew it we were fairly launched on our last term as Juniors. Our interest was taken up with baseball, track and rowing, but we noticed in passing that White, Holt, Johnson and Heron were elected cup men, while the following appeared as Hogans: Connell, White, Hotchkiss, Pomeroy, Minnigerode and Lohmann. The latter had been acting as Hogan all year.

Moreover we found that Riggs, Franchot, MacCarthy, Hillis, O'Brien, Ely, French, Taft and VanSinderen were members of the Kit Kat Club, while the Pundits announced the following new members: Riggs, Hillis, Ely, Philbin, Williams.

Richardson was secretary of the University Club, with Hoyt treasurer. L. Hall was a member of the Governing Board. Holt was eventually elected president.

After a very squally opening of the Corinthian Yacht Club we discovered that Richardson and Johnson were rear commodore and fleet captain respectively.

And now we come to an event unprecedented in the annals of Yale, an event which split the class into two rabidly hostile factions, dividing entries and setting roommates at loggerheads. We mean the Great Schism, the Vanderbilt-Oval affair. This question, which was to end so turbulently, all started from an innocent effort on the part of the Naves to make us adopt the Oval as our home for Senior year. Scarcely had the idea spread when it met with a storm of opposition, causing a flood of communications to the Naves and a host of heated discussions all over the Campus at all times of the day and night. The matter culminated in a grand riot on the Campus which furnished the New Haven papers with headlines for days.

One afternoon a poster, afterwards traced to Cooney, appeared on one of the windows of Welch, scurrilously attacking the Oval and calling on all Vanderbilt men to assemble that evening; a little later another poster appeared high up on the gates of the Oval summoning all to gather around the sundial. After supper each party, cheering for its dormitory, marched in lock step on to the Campus and started to parade around. The Vanderbilt party numbered most of the athletes and was led by Coy, Cooney and Goebel, while the Oval crowd, representing the literary and social light, was led by Jewett, Taft, Hewes, Clement, Hoyt and Cowles. Each party had songs specially composed, the Ovalites announcing that they wanted "the Oval and united Yale." As was bound to happen, the two parties eventually collided and a lively and protracted riot ensued. After that the parties retired to their respective headquarters and the Oval demonstration ended by all joining hands in a wild war dance around the sundial, after which Hewes led a very spirited rendering of "Bright College Years." The next day the polls were open all day at the post office and amid scenes of tremendous excitement men were rushed to the ballot boxes and pounced upon by members of the rival factions, some, owing to force of circumstances ending by voting precisely the opposite of what they had intended. A three-fourths' majority was required and when the result was announced the Oval had lost by a handful of votes.

Omega Lambda Chi night furnished an opportunity for some of our men to serve as marshals; for the first time the Seniors appeared in costume and the celebration was most successful.

Meanwhile the baseball team, with Johnson as assistant manager, and under the extremely able leadership of Captain Murphy, had been following a glorious career which ended in a hard-fought and well earned championship, defeating both Princeton and Harvard in two games out of three. Philbin and Logan played on the team and Philbin was elected captain. Heron acted as manager of the Freshman team.

The track team also had a successful season, winning both the Harvard and Princeton dual meets. Griggs was assistant manager, and the following were on the team: Nelson, Goebel, Cooney, Coy, L. King, Haskell, Kirjassoff, Seymour. Nelson was elected captain and Haskell cross-country captain. Bayne-Jones was manager of the Freshman team.

In June the crews left for the Ferry; our class was represented by Wodell, Wallis and Brainard, with Curtiss assistant manager. In spite of the noblest efforts Harvard won the race. Wodell was elected captain; Bingham managed the Freshman crew.

And this is the end.

As soon as exams. were over most of us left New Haven and in a few weeks our class was scattered to the four winds of Heaven. A few stayed for Commencement and enjoyed the performance given by the Dramat. on the Campus and the other festivities, and after a farewell party in Bridgeport, very early on the morning after the Senior Prom., in Pomeroy's machine, attended by Holt, Hoyt and others, the last remnants of what had been our Junior Class shook the dust of New Haven from their shoes, full of the glories of the past and the hopes of the future.

The rest is silence.

SENIOR YEAR

After all, Senior year, the real Senior year that lives in the hearts of each of us, cannot be written about. All the sentiment and association that is crowded into that year of years cannot and ought never to appear in print. Perhaps a little catalogue, though, half in earnest, half in jest, of what we have done, may serve to recall and freshen memories, that will grow dim as we become engrossed in selling bonds or buying Spencerville apples. Such a review at best has about the continuity and absorbing interest of a laundry list, but will at least allow us to check off the events and see where we stand, when we have given "Corny" our last collar.

We started off the year by getting together all the "Y" sweaters we could find and impressing the Freshmen. The rest of us turned our coats inside out and watched the wrestling from front row seats, ably supporting, however, the entire undergraduate body. The new Dean must not be left out, when we speak of the beginning of the year. According to reports, the gates were to be locked at nine, and no student was to be allowed to eat crackers in bed. But so far as we have seen, these reports have been greatly exaggerated and we are still able to get on the Campus as late as ten o'clock, and sometimes later. Looking at him from the perspective of a year's life under his administration, we agree with the Lit. that in Dean Jones "there came unto Eli a man of God."

Nothing was of greater interest during the fall than football. In this our class, quite naturally, took the lead. I say, "quite naturally" because of the twenty-three men who won the coveted Y, ten were members of the now famous Class of 1910.

With Prec White as manager and headed by Ted Coy, the greatest athlete that has ever "fought for the blue" since the balmy days of Frank Merriwell, we had the most phenomenal team Yale has ever seen! (cheers.) Those who helped to produce the well-known effects on Princeton and Harvard were Carroll Cooney, Dummy Logan, Ford Johnson, Bill Goebel, Steve Philbin, Harry Holt, Fred Murphy, Bus Brown and J.

Brookes Spencer. Brookes is the only member of a Yale football team who was ever able to make the Notes. At least that is his story. The season closed with Mr. Spencer, declaring to admiring thousands, that "Ted was really better than he was, in spite of what Walter Camp says." But out of every season there comes a crowd of battered heroes, who are not greeted with much applause by enthusiastic females, but who are a vitally important part of any athletic progress. These men are the second team and members of the squad who toil "from morn till dewy eve" with nothing but the kicks of their "betters" to cheer faint hearts. Those in whose breast hope sprang eternal were Curt Platt, Mac McCormick, Harry Bingham, Mac McArthur, Nick Carter, Pete King and John Dunn.

Along about this time, the New York Herald was trying to prove that Cook discovered a small spot known as the North Pole. At the same time, the New York Times was making vigorous attempts to call everyone "liar" who wouldn't admit that one Peary had somewhat the same claims for glory. Be that as it may, the whole question was put to rest one frosty afternoon, by the "Yale Arctic club." Doodle Pomeroy as Commander Weary, accompanied by convicts and gumdrops, succeeded in ousting Tommy Hewes as Dr. Crook from the frozen North, alias Dick Hawes. In company with Aurora Borealis (Harvey Warren) and Harry Whitney, the local sportsman (Len Stanley), Captain Crook retired to the goal posts and had another drink. This world-wide dispute was settled so amicably, that the Class of 1910 resolved to tackle another great problem. This time it was the suffrage question. The following week, Mrs. Spankthirst (Dave Ely), and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont (Nig Hartridge), appeared at the game with a host of admiring friends and thirsty followers. The political issue involved, however, was not so much a question of suffrage as it was the all-absorbing topic of license or no license. As a result of the club's campaign, all the ladies in New Haven are voting now, and the men are still wetting the "short pallet."

Long before all this happened, however, we elected a whole bunch of committees. The results were: Class Secretary, Bob French; Historian, Tom Hewes, peeking out of the trousers of Carroll Cooney, resigned. The Triennial committee is Elton Hoyt as chairman, Molly DeSilver, Fred Murphy, John Heron and Steve Philbin; Cap and Gown committee, Gus Knight, Kent Clow, Dave Daggett; Class Book committee, Lawrason Riggs, Wayland Williams, Bob French; Cup committee (prophetically), Milt Griggs, DeKoven Bowen; Class Orator, Cesar Lohmann; Class Poet, Arthur Baker; Class Day committee, Dud Armstrong, Ros Austin, Bob Taft, Carl Jewett, Lyle Hall; Picture committee, Brookes, Spencer, Lyn King, Gil Smith; Ivy committee, Frank Brainard, Joe Roberts, Art Coates; Supper committee, Fred Hotchkiss, Sheldon Yates, Doodle Pomeroy, L'Engle Hartridge, Lyman Hine. A few days later came the election of the Senior Prom. committee, Brookes Spencer as chairman, Milt Griggs, Harry Curtiss, L'Engle Hartridge, Molly DeSilver, Steve Heron and John Philbin.

Along about this time, the Senior Council was elected and started in on its tyrannical, arbitrary, despotic and altogether delightfully superior régime. This little oligarchy was composed of seven physical, mental and moral brutes. Carl Jewett was chairman, with that ardent and noisy democrat (small d) Tom Hewes as secretary. The others were Ted Coy, Bill Duncan, Fred Murphy, Merrell Clement and Frank Brainard. After they had reformed pretty nearly everything in sight with the "New Rules," so called, they became the seven most sought after men in college. But they stood their popularity well, though Tommy had to give a practical demonstration of the way the rules worked, and got on probation. Sic semper tyrannis!

THE "COURANT" BOARD.

That little matter on the Campus which the writer modestly avoids had in it the elements of "much instruction—and some fun." However, his connection with the Dramatic Association gave him the peculiar right to direct the chorus with somewhat the same vigor with which Tommy Hewes led cheers.

The Yale Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs Association (all in one breath) celebrated its "forty-fourth year" with the usual Christmas trip. Those that helped to give the girls a good time were, Cæsar Lohmann, leader of the Glee Club, Skinny Connell, leader of the Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, Gus Knight, who carried the string box, and King of Ladies' Men, our slow but generous Mr. Holt, manager. Then there was the Famous All Star Lone Star Quartette, Ted Coy (rubber), Harry Holt, who always gave the pitch, Skinny Connell, leader and corresponding secretary, and Benny Clement, Keeper of Kenneth. Others who sang and played were L'Engle Hartridge, the Welsh Rabbit, Louis Linder Nabstedt, Minnie Minnigerode, Warren Davis, George Richardson, Harry Curtiss, T. Hewes, Lyle Hall, Fred Hotchkiss, "High" Roberts, Dicky Phelps, Harold Reid, Louis Fouts, Jack Ewen and

CLASS DAY COMMITTEE.

Cowles of Rye—Who? Cowles! From where?—Rye! The Lone Stars had many imitators, short lived and sad, not deserving the prominence of mention, though as a matter of policy, we note, the Rheumatic Choir, the Bering Straits and the University Quartette.

But this was not the only trip that a Yale organization indulged in. The Dramatic Association enlarged their rather recently acquired field of activity, and went way up to Waterbury and as far south as Bridgeport and Washington, Pinny Riggs, as president, led them, in company with Pack Franchot, who was the mercenary manager. The Troupe got snow bound, but Pascal said he didn't give a damn if they didn't have any show in Washington. Besides, the snowdrift story was a good ad., and how could he be expected to pull 'em out, when he had to sit up all night writing all his friends from the White House. Dave Ely, Phil Roberts, Harry Warren, Harold Obernauer, John Metcalf and Dave Chantler managed to pull through the trip. Louis Dreyfus also played—the violin.

SENIOR PROMENADE COMMITTEE.

During the winter we "made good friends and studied some," as the song singeth. That immortal band of brothers, the Whiffenpoofs, kept Mory's financially above water with the help of the Hogans. Pete Roome trained the Whiffenpoofs and had under his simple smile, Doodle, Minnie, Cæsar, Tommy the Whistler, Skinny and Fred Hotchkiss. Ted Coy was voted "perpetual guest." "Shall I wasting," "Annie Laurie," and some of the others have won a big place in the hearts of many through the efforts of this great organization. The Hogans performed their task well, and in fact consistently and at the same time quietly, "filled the bill." Prec White was Pop, with Minnie, Doodle, Fred Hotchkiss, Cæsar and Skinny as Lolly Pops. Ted Coy and Ford Johnson rang in occasionally as guests or friends of the family. Speaking of clubs, the "New Rules" are credited with having brought into existence the Famous Commutation Club. A notice in the News asking all members to report in the court with traveling bags and derby hats first gave the organization its public début. Carroll Cooney ran for president, but Lyle

VANDERBILT GROUP.

Hall defeated him on a technical issue. Lyle always rode in a parlor car. Then there was Prec White, the Poli King, who kept the class informed as to what was the best thing at Poli's, and what her real name was.

In the winter, the old men of the class, the hairs of whose heads were easily numbered, would gather and repeat solemnly that familiar line of Browning's, "While every day my hairs fall more and more." Conspicuous among those present were Tom Bowers, Harry Holt, Skinny Connell, Slater Johnston, Brookes Spencer, Bunny Clement and old Baldy Norton.

In athletics, the basketball team, though unsuccessful, worked consistently hard and faithfully. Ducky Eames was captain and Curt Platt as manager carried with him on his trips Frank Scudder, George Hyde, and Fritz Drew.

In the new Carnegie Pool, Harold Reid and George Hyde performed to the glory of the swimming team, who had a championship year.

The term ended with the annual banquets of the literary organizations. If we may mention the News under this title, we must note for future generations that this is the banquet at which one Brookes Spencer was toastmaster.

Of course, we had our Pundits—every class has them, just as every child has the measles, mumps or chicken pox. Arthur Baker, Withered Barroll, Lawrason Riggs, Dave Ely, Dick Hawes, Stanhope Bayne-Jones, Steve Philbin, Phil Roberts, Dick Hillis and Wayland Williams were those in the class who, as someone has put it, were "either clever, or had something the matter with them." Dame Rumor hath it that "A Dash at the Pole" was published under their auspices. Art Baker, however, emphatically denies that he ever had anything to do with it, except, he adds apologetically, to look up some of the puns.

Our spring term was perhaps the happiest and the saddest of all. For not until then did it dawn on us with any realizing sense that our days at Yale were numbered.

Athletically we started with a most unfortunate accident to Steve Philbin, captain of the baseball team. It was not only unfortunate for the College that he should be disabled for the entire season, but for the man himself, who has given so much of himself to Yale, and for Yale that he could not have as a climax to his years of service, this captaincy of the baseball team. Dummy Logan followed him as captain, with Fred Murphy and Ted Coy helping on the University and Tap Gregory on the second nine. Ford Johnson managed the cubs, and Earl Williams, alias Harry Holt, scored. Ken Fenton coached the Freshman team.

In crew Ruthven Wodell made a name as captain, with such men back of him as Brainard, Ben Wallis, "Gus" Rogers and Bill Flint. As for the new George Ade boathouse, begun this year, Manager Taxicab Curtiss, the man with the now famous Thousand Dollar Walk, built most of it himself. Elton Hoyt was appointed coach of the Freshmen, but his inability to be with us in the fall made it necessary for Dick Hawes, the human nail file, to take the youngsters in hand.

Frank Nelson led the track team, with Milt Griggs as manager. Those whom he managed for our class were: Al Haskell, Carroll Cooney, Lyn King, Percy Goebel, Max Kirjassoff and Spike Seymour.

Savin Rock opened as usual, as Bill Duncan, our president of Dwight Hall, predicted it would. Elt Hoyt kept the University Club going, and we cannot resist saying, in better shape than it has ever been run before. In scholarship, Bob Taft, known to his intimates and the New York Sun as the Crown Prince, presided at the Phi Beta Kappa meeting, at least he would have if they had met, for he was president.

Soccer was given a decided boost by Bill Holbrook, Pot Goddard, Frank Jennings, Ed Ingraham, Jack Ewen and Hilley Benner. On the gym team Morgie Hebard and Don Dickey occasionally took a shot, while in wrestling Percy Goebel, Rog Hayes and Jack Sweeney took a fall out of their opponents. Frank Lewis and Tom Means turned a frequent giant swing on the gym. team with much éclat and a few clothes.

I have also been asked to mention the Yale Corinthian Yacht Club "open all night." The commodore was one George Richardson, also coach of the Freshman football team and a member of the Coöp.

The unfortunate events of our year and those that affected our personal feelings deepest were the absence in the fall term of Elton Hoyt, and in part of the winter and spring of George Harrison, Dud Armstrong, Don Dickey, and Henry Baars.

And now the year is done. To some it has been a glorious one, to others it has been shadowed by hardships and discouragements. To all it has been one primarily of friendship. As these years fade into memories, let us forget the differences and disappointments. May our inspirations for work and service in the world be the sweeter things of our life together! Let us go out to larger deeds with those words which our mother Yale is whispering to each man of us, "those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you."

OBITUARY

DONALD ANNIS was born in Detroit, Michigan, May 20, 1880. Newton Annis, his father, lives in Detroit.

Annis prepared for Yale at the Detroit University School. Zeta Psi. He died of pneumonia at the Yale Infirmary in April, 1908.

Donald Annis was a man of exceptional ability. He was a conscientious scholar, to whom study was a pleasure as well as a duty. The high stand which he attained during his college course can give only a slight idea of the future which lay before him. Combined with his intellect were all the traits of a noble character which made him so lovable. He was modest and retiring; a true and sincere friend. His ideals were the highest and his manner of living, as Dean Wright so aptly said, could be a model which any man would do well to follow.

CHARLES B. PRICE.

VICTOR SOBEL SHEAR was born on March 1, 1887, at Warren, Pennsylvania, and died at Phoenix, Arizona, on April 28, 1909. He was taken ill with pneumonia in the spring of Sophomore year, and never entirely recovered from the effects of that illness. On recuperating, he was threatened with consumption and went West to seek good health, only after a year's struggle to succumb to this disease.

In his death his intimate associates lost as true and sincere a friend as a man can have. He was industrious, a splendid companion, and always considerate of others.

Conscientious work and perseverance resulted in his election as assistant business manager of the Courant shortly before he was stricken. The memory of two years' college association with him will always be a pleasant and inspiring recollection to his friends, and leaves a sentiment of deep regret in his untimely death.

ROBERT B. STERN.

CONCERNING "SHEET B."

The Class Book Committee's work, though undeniably tinged with tedium, had its interesting features. Its members owe a debt of gratitude to the ways of the class for restraining their humor within admirably conservative bounds. Their efforts were really diverting at times, as were the judgments of the unconscious humorists. We refuse, however, to go on record as assigning any of the specimens quoted herein to either class, since their authors are the only proper deciders of such a delicate question.

It was interesting to note the large number of poems, authors, and other favorites who received votes—over sixty in several cases. The esthetic standards displayed were on the whole high, though we have to deplore the fact that the Iliad and the Odyssey received but two and one votes respectively, the former number being also that of the Seniors' who made the ambiguous reply "Hard to Say." Dare we affirm that this is not a title? We trust that the man who voted for "I Arise from Dreams" as his favorite college song has supported his choice by never missing chapel. And surely nothing can exceed the frank though vague congeniality of the choice "Drinking Song." The characters in history included such varied worthies as Cleopatra, Maximilian of Mexico, and Mahmud of Ghanzi. We are speechless before the erudition of the last-named choice. The wits waxed ironical in their choice of members of the Dramatic Association as favorite actors and actresses, while the height of mordancy was reached by him who named a classmate as his college grievance, a more tolerant humorist choosing another of his fellows as his favorite amusement. Quite the most unique amusement was, however, "sewing buttons on Teddy Bears." A soothing choice was "dreaming," which also appeared in more sophisticated form of "Bijou-Dreaming." One Senior, in regard to political affiliations, wrote with sturdy terseness "Best Man." The Vanderbilt janitresses proudly vindicated themselves by winning several votes as favorite campus characters. A muskrat unknown to the committee received a vote under this head. Since Carrie, the squirrel, also received one man's choice, chivalry leads us to accord her the three other votes won by her species. We were unaware that any of the campus statuary was sprightly enough to be mistaken for Hermes, till reminded of the functionary known by that soubriquet. The Seniors' taste in drinks is superbly representative, ranging from apricot brandy and whiskey fling to ice cream soda and malted milk. The overwhelming victory of water was encouraging though somewhat prosaic. The boom of orangeade which was planned resulted in a fizzle.

The committee desires to thank the class for its legibility. There were but few hieroglyphics used. Most of the blanks were completely filled out, or nearly so,—a gratifying result, since unlike the officials now convulsing the country, we had no support of the police to aid us in obtaining data.
